

Schizophrenia is a serious mental disease due to psychological causes. There may be hallucinations or delusions. The patient tends to become more solitary sitting alone and hardly speaks. On other occasions there may be violent outbursts. Schizophrenia is a psychological disease due basically to the inability to face up to a hard reality. Heredity sometimes plays a part. Essentially progressive maladjustment in early life leads to an escape into a dream world.

Melancholia is a mental disorder = Depression, a mental disease which may be part of manic depressive-insanity or simply an attack of depression coming on at the change of life. The symptoms are anxiety and fear due to no obvious cause and more or less severe depression. The most serious danger is that the patient may commit suicide.

